Feds Planning Booklet About School Growth

Dr. Charles Fitzwater, chief of the local school administration section of the Department of Health, Education, and Welfare, last week visited the Torrance Unified School District, with an eye to getting information on operation of a fast growing district.

The government official said Torrance was chosen as a good example of the West Coast for a study his department in making. They are planning to put out a booklet explaining best administrative practices in fast-growing districts, he said.

Dr. Fitzwater previously studied districts in New Mexico, Utah, Colorado, North Carolina, Pennsylvania, and Minnesota. He said that Torrance is known to educators throughout the country because of its work in solving growth problems, the "Little Red School" or multigrade program, its "Supermarket of Knowledge," or Educational Materials Building, and its handling of school financing.

Veteran Sea Captain, 7 Others Saved

A veteran Torrance sea captain, Leonard Barber, spent nearly an hour in the water off Santa Barbara Sunday with his three-man crew and four oil company engineers after an expensive exploration craft exploded and sank. Barber, who lives at 23113 Penna St., and others on the 140-ton craft were forced to abandon the floating laboratory after battling the flames for 45 minutes.

Their distress calls were heard by Coast Guard craft which sped to the scene.

An oil company tanker had picked up the crew after about one hour in the water.
